EDITION	Volume 1 — Signs 001-571

BEFORE YOU BEGIN

Preface

Language should never be a barrier to being understood. SignBridge began as a simple question: what if a sign language could be described the same way a computer describes anything else — as a string of bits that a camera, a script, or a person could read with equal ease?

This handbook is the result. It documents a complete two-hand binary sign system in which every word, question, and everyday phrase reduces to a ten-digit formula — five fingers on the left hand, five on the right, each one either open or closed. There is nothing to memorise beyond the shape of a hand and the value of a finger.

It is written for three audiences at once: for a Deaf or hard-of-hearing signer learning the vocabulary; for a hearing family member, teacher, or interpreter learning alongside them; and for the engineers building the real-time recognition system that reads these signs from a camera and speaks them aloud. Wherever you fall among the three, start with Part One — it explains the formula behind every page that follows.

A NOTE ON THIS EDITION

This Volume One edition documents the first 571 confirmed signs of the 1,024-sign SignBridge vocabulary — the complete core grammar, questions, people, places, food, work, time, health, emotion, travel, home, technology, shopping, emergency, courtesy, and conversational sign families. The remaining reserved codes are listed in Appendix A and will be published as Volume Two once finalised.

PART ONE · INTRODUCTION

What Is SignBridge?

SignBridge is a constructed two-hand sign language in which meaning is carried entirely by finger position. Rather than the flowing, spatial grammar of natural sign languages, SignBridge encodes each word or phrase as a fixed ten-bit pattern — a format equally easy for a human to learn and a computer vision model to classify.

WHO IT IS FOR

- Deaf & hard-of-hearing signers: a fast, learnable vocabulary for everyday needs and self-expression.
- Families & caregivers: a shared starting point that does not require years of formal ASL/BSL study.
- Educators & speech therapists: a structured, gradeable curriculum with a clear right-or-wrong answer per sign.
- Developers & researchers: a camera-friendly, unambiguous label set for real-time sign-recognition models.

DESIGN PRINCIPLES

BINARY

One finger, one bit. No ambiguity between similar hand shapes.

BIMANUAL

Two hands double the vocabulary space to $2^{10} = 1,024$ signs.

CAMERA-NATIVE

Every sign is a static, holdable pose a model can classify frame-by-frame.

EXTENSIBLE

New signs simply claim the next unused 10-bit code.

PART ONE · THE BINARY FORMULA

How It Works

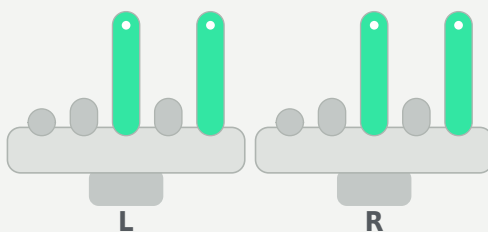

Every SignBridge sign is a 10-bit code split evenly across two hands. Each hand contributes five bits, one per finger, always read in the same order: Thumb, Index, Middle, Ring, Pinky.

THE RULE

FINGER OPEN = 1

FINGER CLOSED = 0

Left hand bits 1-5, then right hand bits 6-10 -> a 10-character binary code

READING THE EXAMPLE

Left hand: 0 0 1 0 1 thumb & middle open

Right hand: 0 0 1 0 1 thumb & middle open

Full code: 00101 00101 see vocabulary tables

WHY 1,024 SIGNS?

Ten independent bits produce $2^{10} = 1,024$ unique combinations. SignBridge groups these into 32 thematic blocks of 32 signs each — pronouns, verbs, questions, people, places, food, work, time, health, feelings, travel, home, devices, shopping, emergencies, courtesy, and beyond — so a learner can master one block at a time instead of the whole system at once.

PART ONE · HOW RECOGNITION WORKS

System Architecture

Because every sign is a fixed handshape rather than a moving gesture, SignBridge is built to be read live from an ordinary webcam. The pipeline below is the reference flow used by the companion recognition app.

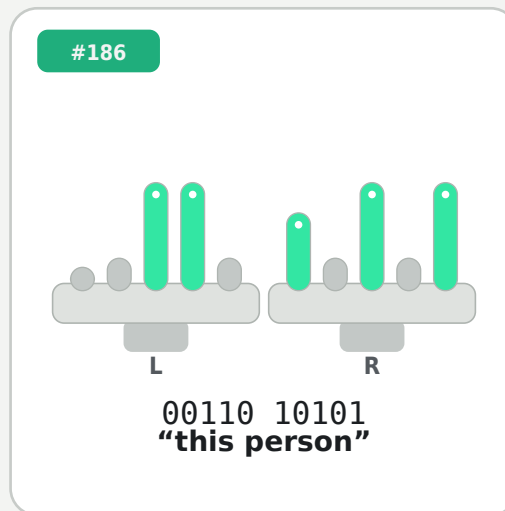

CORE STACK

Capture	Browser MediaDevices / webcam, or mobile camera feed
Hand Tracking	21-landmark hand skeleton per hand (e.g. MediaPipe Hands)
Bit Classifier	Per-finger open/closed threshold on joint-angle geometry
Encoder	Concatenates left+right bits into the 10-bit sign code
Vocabulary Engine	Hash lookup against the 1,024-entry SignBridge dictionary
Output	On-screen caption + optional text-to-speech narration
Delivery	Static web build hosted at sign-bridge-for-deaf.netlify.app

PART ONE · LEGEND

How To Read This Handbook

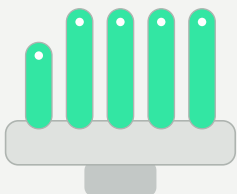

Every vocabulary entry in Parts Two onward follows the same card layout, shown below.

CARD ELEMENTS

- 1 Sign number, 1 through 1,024
- 2 Left-hand glyph · bits 1-5 (thumb -> pinky)
- 3 Right-hand glyph · bits 6-10 (thumb -> pinky)
- 4 The full 10-bit binary code, left hand then right
- 5 The English meaning of the sign

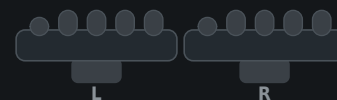

FINGER KEY

Filled green bar, fully extended=
OPEN finger = bit value 1

Short grey stub, folded into the palm=
CLOSED finger = bit value 0

PUTTING SIGNS TOGETHER

SignBridge phrases can be produced as single ready-made signs, or chained sign-by-sign from the vocabulary for anything not yet covered by its own code. A few useful examples:

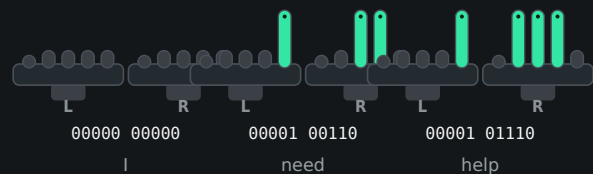

"I need water"

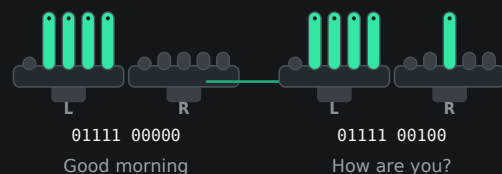

"Thank you very much"

"I need help"

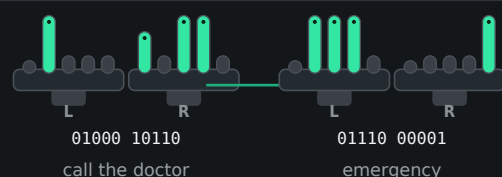

"Good morning. How are you?"

"I don't understand — please repeat"

"Call the doctor — emergency"

SIGNS 572-1,024

Appendix A — Reserved Codes

The SignBridge namespace reserves all 1,024 ten-bit combinations for future vocabulary. Codes 10001-11011 through 11111-11111 (signs 572 through 1,024) are reserved for upcoming blocks — including numbers, colours, additional professions, weather, sports, and extended conversational phrases — and will be documented in Volume Two as they are finalised and adopted.

Educators and developers extending SignBridge locally should claim new codes sequentially from 10001-11011 onward and submit them for inclusion in the next edition, so that the vocabulary remains a single shared standard rather than fragmenting into incompatible dialects.
